

12. Industry Academia Panel, 21.03.2024

Prof. Dr. Volker F. Wendisch, Genetics of Prokaryotes, Biology & CeBiTec, Bielefeld University, 33615 Bielefeld

volker.wendisch@uni-bielefeld.de

Volker F. Wendisch holds the Chair of Genetics of Prokaryotes at the Faculty of Biology at Bielefeld University, Germany. He serves as deputy scientific director of its Center for Biotechnology CeBiTec and is vice president of CLIB-Cluster, an international open innovation cluster of stakeholders active in biotechnology and bioeconomy from academic institutes and universities, investors, SMEs, and industry based in Düsseldorf, Germany.

Volker F. Wendisch received his diploma in biology from Cologne University, Germany, and completed his PhD at the Research Center Jülich in 1997. After a postdoc at the University of California, Berkeley, CA, USA, he was Professor for Metabolic Engineering at Münster University before he joined Bielefeld University.